Torridon

Avalanche Hazard Forecast

Issued 03/03/2022

FOR PERIOD 18:00HRS Thu 03/03/2022 TO 18:00HRS Fri 04/03/2022

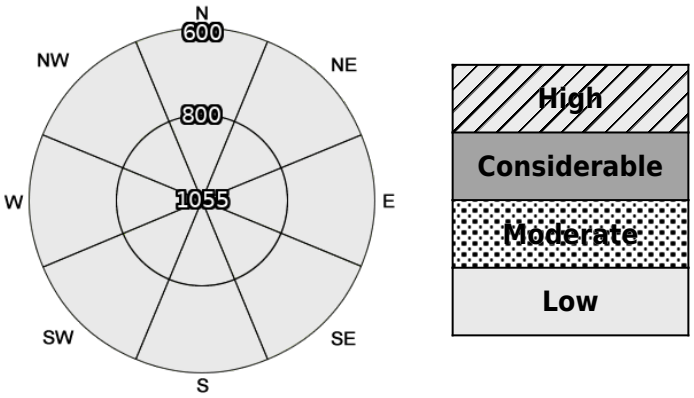

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Friday 04/03/2022

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will have good stability throughout, largely well bonded and firm, particularly at higher elevations where it will refreeze. New snow amounts are not expected to be significant. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

Light showers this evening, wintry above 700 metres will die out overnight. Showers will return in the afternoon, again wintry above 600 metres, but snow amounts will be small. Winds will generally be West-North-Westerly, light to moderate throughout the forecast period. The freezing level will lower from 800 metres overnight to 700 metres through the day.

Comments

High pressure is set to build across the North-West into the weekend with dry and cold conditions.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.