

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 28/02/2023

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will remain mainly frozen and generally stable. Main snow accumulations will be limited to high North and East facing corries. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

It will remain dry with light winds. The freezing level will be around 600m with a warmer inversion later at higher elevations.

Comments

Remaining clear and calm with a mainly frozen snowpack. Water ice remains on many paths and open hillsides, notable those remaining in the shade.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.