

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE MODERATE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 28/03/2023

Avalanche Problems

Wind Slab

Persistent Weak Layers

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Fresh areas of windslab will form during the morning, mainly on steep North-West, North and North-East aspects above 950 metres. This snow will thaw later in the period. Localised instabilities will be present where this fresh snow exists. Exposed old snow will be stable. The avalanche hazard will be Moderate.

Forecast Weather Influences

There will be a period of snow above 800 metres overnight and during Tuesday morning, followed by warmer temperatures and rain at all levels by the afternoon. Strong South-Easterly winds.

Comments

Snow early on Tuesday quickly turning to rain at all levels at lunchtime

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.