

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Friday 12/01/2024

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The older snowpack will remain well bonded, very firm and stable in all locations. A very thin layer of softer snow will remain in some wind sheltered locations above 950 metres with slightly deeper deposits on East aspects. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

It will remain dry with light variable winds overnight becoming moderate from the West-South-West during the day. Multiple inversions will result in an ill defined freezing level.

Comments

Weather forecast to become slightly less settled from Friday night onwards.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.