High	Natural and human triggered avalanches will occur. In some cases, numerous large, often very large sized natural avalanches can be expected.
Considerable	Natural and human triggered avalanches possible, in some cases large, in isolated cases very large sized natural avalanches are possible.
Moderate	Very large sized natural avalanches are unlikely. Human triggering possible in indicated steep places.
Low	Only small and medium sized natural avalanches are possible. Human triggering possible in steep, extreme terrain.

Forecast Weather Influences

It will remain dry throughout. Inversion conditions mean the freezing level will not be well defined. However, summit temperature expected to be below freezing throughout.

Forecast Snow Stability and Avalanche Hazard

At higher levels the surface of the snowpack will form a crust. At lower levels what remains will continue to gently thaw. Stability will be generally good throughout. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Observed Avalanche Hazard - Sun 31/03/2024

Observed Weather Influences

It was a dry day with some warm sunshine and light winds from the South. After a slight overnight frost, the freezing level rose well above the summits.

Observed Snow Stability and Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack formed a slight crust overnight. Through the day it softened in the warm conditions. Stability is generally good throughout. However, some small and medium size sections of cornice remain and these are prone to collapse in the mild conditions. The avalanche hazard is Low.

Mountain Conditions

Observed Mountain Travel Conditions

Breakable crust in some locations, softening through the day. Good visibility. Winds approx 10 - 20 mph.

Comments

Rock and ice fall a hazard on the crags, blocks of ice observed falling off the Post Face on Sunday.
