Torridon

Avalanche Hazard Forecast

Issued 09/04/2024

FOR PERIOD 18:00HRS Tue 09/04/2024 TO 18:00HRS Wed 10/04/2024

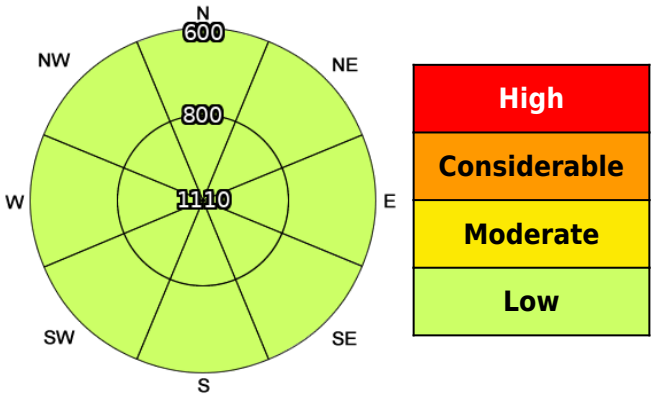

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Wednesday 10/04/2024

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

New snow deposits will quickly thaw at all levels through the afternoon. The existing limited and stable snow cover will remain much depleted with most snow lingering in patches, strips and slivers, mostly inland above 800 metres. The near coastal mountains and tops will be largely snow free. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

Wintry showers will die out this evening, followed by rain at all levels through the afternoon as the freezing level abruptly rises to well above the summits late morning. The fresh North-Westerly wind will back South by daybreak, strengthening strong to gale force ahead of the rain.

Comments

Remaining unsettled and generally mild.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.