

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Wednesday 07/01/2026

Avalanche Problems

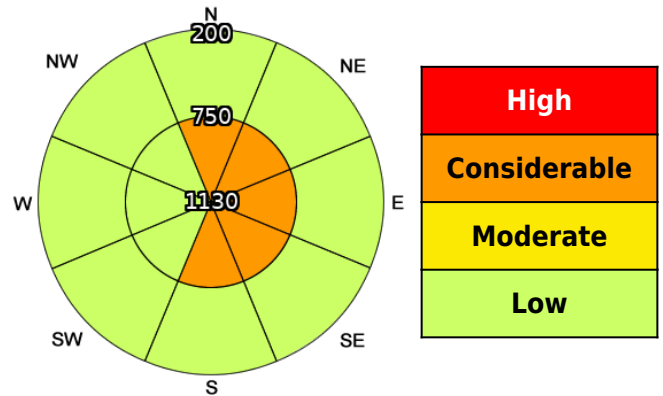

Wind Slab

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Above 750m on Northerly through East to Southerly aspects deep accumulations of unstable windslab will become more widespread with gully tops, coire rims and head walls most affected. Cornices above same aspects will be prone to collapse. Soft deep and unconsolidated snow lies on most aspects below 750m but this will be generally well bonded and stable. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable

Forecast Weather Influences

Winds will be strong North-North-Westerly overnight easing and becoming light North-Westerly during the afternoon. Persistent snowfall overnight is expected to die out during the daylight hours. Freezing level around 300m.

Comments

Deep snow and hard going on foot if breaking trail.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.