

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Saturday 04/04/2026

Avalanche Problems

Wind Slab

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Areas of unstable windslab will be deposited through the day. Initially deposits will be quite shallow and mainly on North to East aspects above 900 metres. These areas will increase in depth and extent particularly during the afternoon. North-West and West aspect will also become affected. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable

Forecast Weather Influences

Snow showers are expected overnight and during the morning before a more substantial band of snowfall reaches the area late afternoon. Winds from the South-West backing to the South-East and strengthening during the afternoon. The freezing level will be around 500 metres rising towards 1200 metres right at the end of the period.

Comments

Moderate hazard for much of the day, becoming Considerable with the arrival of Storm Dave late afternoon/early evening.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.