

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE MODERATE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 23/03/2010

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Deposits of unstable snow will be present in sheltered gullies and hollows and on mainly North-West through North to East aspects above 900 metres. Cornices will remain unstable and prone to spontaneous collapse. The avalanche hazard will be Moderate.

Forecast Weather Influences

Isolated snow showers are expected overnight with strong South-West winds. It is expected to be dry during the day with strong Southerly winds and a freezing level around 1200 metres.

Comments

Rock and ice fall remain a potential hazard during these thawing conditions.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.