Glencoe

Avalanche Hazard Forecast

Issued 03/04/2010

FOR PERIOD 18:00HRS Sat 03/04/2010 TO 18:00HRS Sun 04/04/2010

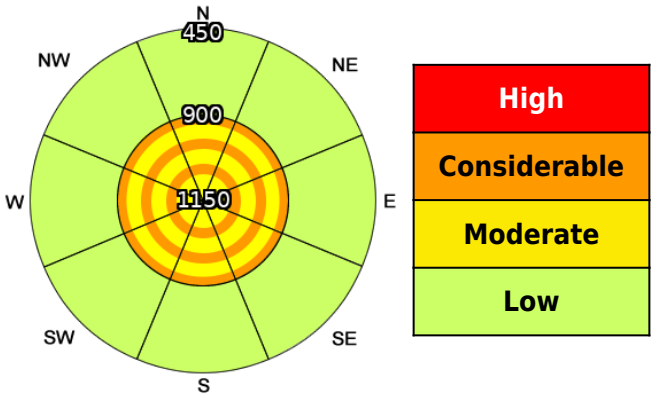

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Sunday 04/04/2010

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

New areas of weakly bonded windslab will form mainly above 900 metres on North-East through to South-East aspects. The greatest deposits will be in sheltered locations and especially sheltered gullies and scarp slopes, here the avalanche hazard will be Considerable.

Forecast Weather Influences

Overnight snow showers above 600 metres on North,North-West winds. During the day snow showers will become light and more isolated and the winds will back to the West. Freezing level, around 750 metres.

Comments

Some sunshine is possible for Sunday. Winds will vary in strength and direction and becoming South, South-West by Sunday evening. A stormy day is forecast for Easter Monday.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.