

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Sunday 11/04/2010

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will remain generally stable in most locations. However on the steepest slopes, surface wet snow instabilities will be present especially on slopes exposed to the sun. There will be small wet snow sluffs on all steep aspects and cornices will be prone to collapse. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

High pressure will affect the area maintaining dry settle conditions. Freezing level will be around 3000 metres and winds light, South-Westerly.

Comments

Thanks for all your support. This will be the last issued report for the season 2009/2010.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.