

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE HIGH

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Wednesday 12/01/2011

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Due to the temperature rise avalanches will occur in areas of steep terrain on many aspects where significant wind slab exists above 800 metres. Westerly through North to North-Easterly aspects will be particularly affected. Existing cornices will weaken and be prone to collapse. The avalanche hazard will be High.

Forecast Weather Influences

Overnight there will be significant snowfall on moderate South-East winds. This will clear around mid morning turning to light rain as the freezing level rises to 1300 metres.

Comments

Instabilities most prominent during the temperature rise.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.