

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 14/02/2012

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will remain generally stable and well bonded on all aspects, at all altitudes. Any new snow will be a dusting above 900 metres. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

It will remain generally dry with the odd shower of sleet, North-Westerly winds will strengthen through the forecast period and gusts could reach storm force later in the day. The freezing level will be around 900 metres.

Comments

Gale force winds are forecast over the higher summits.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.