

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Saturday 02/02/2013

Avalanche Problems

Wind Slab

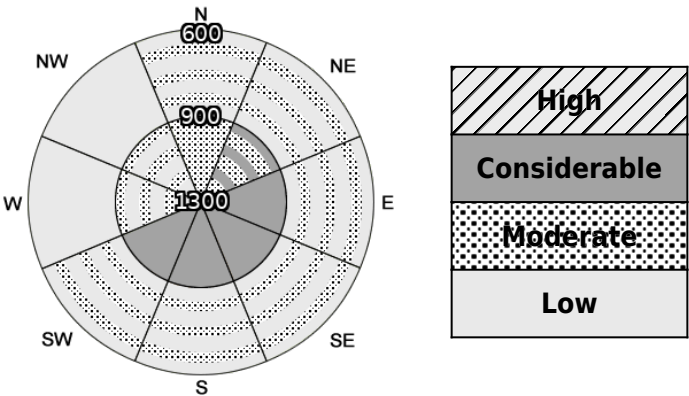

Persistent Weak Layers

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Poorly bonded accumulations of windslab will mostly lie on East through South to South-West aspects above 900 metres. Instabilities will also affect other aspects especially around corrie rims and gully tops on steep North and North-East facing slopes. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable.

Forecast Weather Influences

Snow showers overnight will clear to leave a dry day. Strong North winds will ease a little and back to the North-West. The freezing level will be at 400 metres.

Comments

Cold North airstream for next 24 hours.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.