

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE MODERATE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 19/02/2013

Avalanche Problems

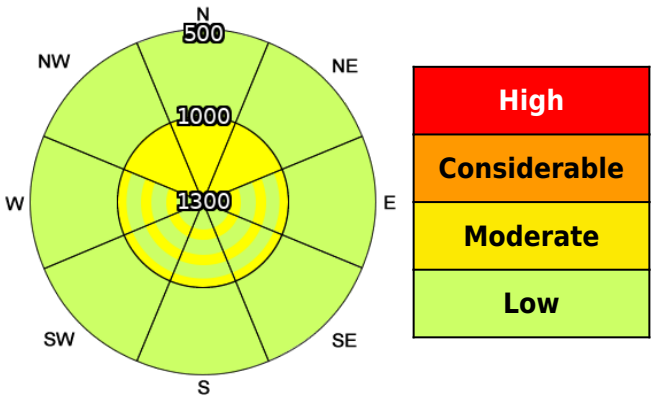

Persistent Weak Layers

Wet Snow

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will continue to be firm and generally stable below 1000 metres on all aspects. Above 1000 metres the snowpack will be moderately well bonded on mainly North-West to North- Easterly aspects above 1000 metres with very steep convex terrain mainly being affected. Surface instabilities on sun affected steep slopes are possible. The avalanche hazard will be Moderate

Forecast Weather Influences

Dry overnight and a little light rain possible in the day, Winds will be light East then South-Easterly. freezing level well above summits. Warm on tops cool in valleys.

Comments

remaining calm and mild

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.