

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLEAvalanche Hazard Forecast for Saturday 04/05/2013*Avalanche Problems*Wet Snow*Cornices*Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Shallow areas of windslab will build up on East to South aspects above 900 metres. These will become progressively more unstable as the freezing level rises and precipitations turns to rain. Remaining cornices will be prone to collapse. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable.

Forecast Weather Influences

A cool night with snow showers above 500 metres and moderate North-West winds is expected. During the day it will turn milder, with the freezing level rising above the summits, and heavy rain falling at all levels.

Comments

Didn't stop raining all day in Glen Coe today (Friday). Wet conditions expected again tomorrow.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.