

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Sunday 23/02/2014

Avalanche Problems

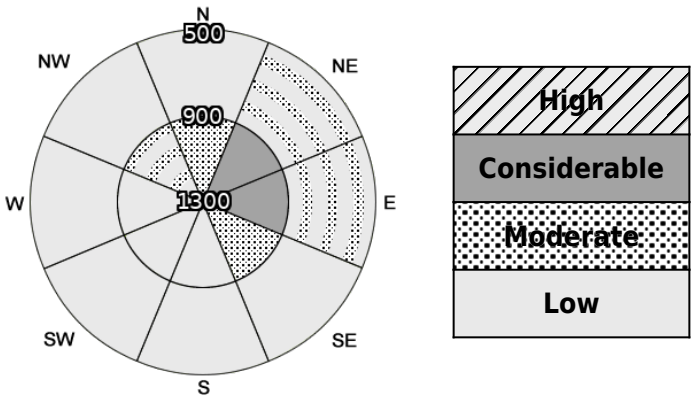

Wet Snow

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will moisten at all levels with localised instabilities on mainly steep North-East to Easterly aspects above 900 metres. Elsewhere the snowpack will be soft but generally stable. Cornices will be prone to collapse. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable

Forecast Weather Influences

Winds will be very strong, generally South-Westerly throughout the forecast period. Precipitation falling as rain and sleet to summit levels overnight and during the morning, drier in the afternoon. Freezing at summit levels.

Comments

A mild and windy period to come.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.