

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Wednesday 14/01/2015

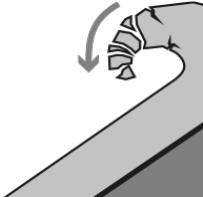

Avalanche Problems

Wind Slab

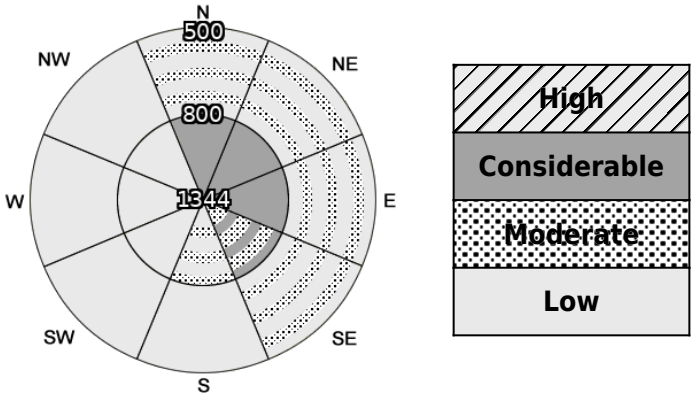

Persistent Weak Layers

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Areas of unstable windslab will continue to form in areas sheltered from the South-West wind. Greatest accumulations will be on steep North, North-East and East aspects above 800m. Avalanches are likely in these locations. Cornices will also form above these aspects. Snow slopes exposed to the wind will be frozen. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable

Forecast Weather Influences

Snow showers will continue with strong South-West winds over the summits. The freezing level will remain around 300m.

Comments

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.