

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE HIGH

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 24/02/2015

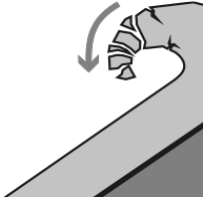

Avalanche Problems

Wind Slab

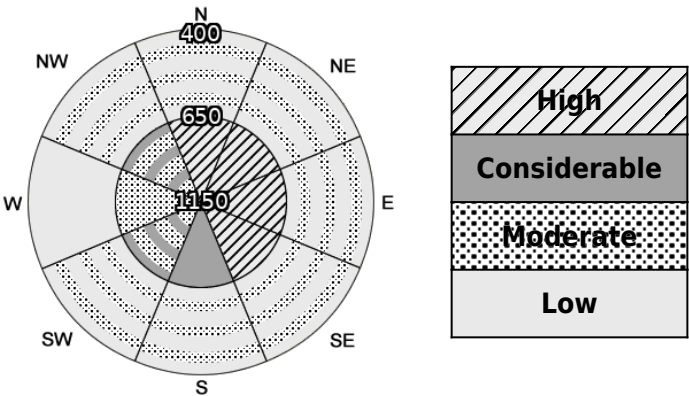

Persistent Weak Layers

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Unstable wind slab will continue to build on North - West through North-East to Southerly aspects above 650 meters where avalanches will occur. Cornices will develop and cross loading will affect other aspects. The avalanche hazard will be High.

Forecast Weather Influences

The Westerly flow will continue with heavy snow showers expected throughout the period. Freezing level will be around 450 meters with gale force West - South - Westerly winds veering West - North - West later.

Comments

Chaotic winds in the coires with poor visibility and significant spindrift, challenging conditions.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.