

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE CONSIDERABLE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Sunday 27/12/2015

Avalanche Problems

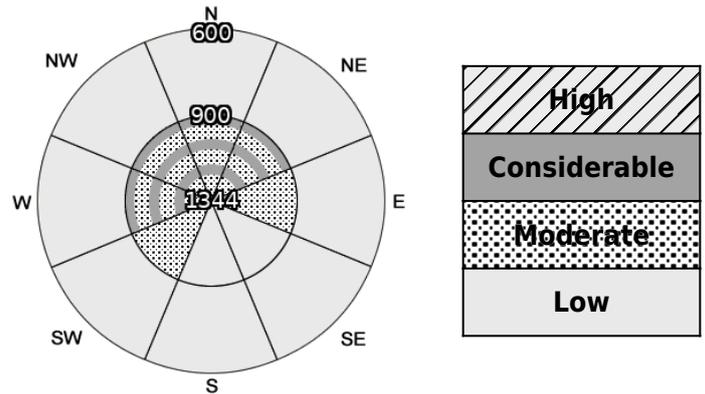

Wind Slab

Persistent Weak Layers

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Fresh unstable windslab will continue to build with the greatest accumulations on West to North aspects above 900 metres. Older windslab will remain mainly on North-East to East aspects above 900 metres. There will be further snow redistribution in the varying winds. Scoured and icy conditions in wind exposed places. The avalanche hazard will be Considerable.

Forecast Weather Influences

Easterly winds decreasing to moderate and veering South-West overnight then backing South-East during the day. Snow showers overnight followed by a mainly dry day. Freezing level around 900 metres.

Comments

Snow being redistributed in strong Easterly winds today.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.