

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 05/01/2016

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The patchy snowpack will remain firm and stable throughout. Snow mainly on North-West to North-East aspects above 850 metres. Icy edges to the old snow was noted. The avalanche hazard will be Low

Forecast Weather Influences

The persistent strong to gale force Easterly wind will gradually ease to 30mph by the end of the day. No precipitation is expected. The freezing level will fluctuate below the summits to as low as 500 metres. Cloudy.

Comments

Easterly airflow to be maintained. Little change expected. The older snow is very firm and icy in places.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.