

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE MODERATEAvalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 10/04/2018*Avalanche Problems*Wet Snow*Cornices*Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

Overnight, cooler conditions will consolidate the snowpack with a slight freeze possible. Then during the day it will continue to slowly thaw. Localised wet snow instabilities will still be present on steep aspects above 900 metres. These are mainly on North-West through North to East aspects. At lower elevations the wet snowpack will be soft but generally stable. Large cornices still exist, and will be very prone to collapse. The avalanche hazard will be Moderate.

Forecast Weather Influences

Overnight, a short period of rain follow by dry weather which will continue through the day, Easterly strengthening through the day. The freezing level remaining above the summits.

Comments

Mainly, dry and clear.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.