

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE LOW

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Tuesday 08/01/2019

Avalanche Problems

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

A trace of new wind drifted snow is possible on East to South-East aspects above 900 metres. New accumulations expected to be very limited in depth and extent. Elsewhere, what remains of the very patchy snowpack will refreeze and become hard and stable. The avalanche hazard will be Low.

Forecast Weather Influences

A little overnight snow then dry. Progressively colder. Winds easing to strong, later moderate North-Westerly.

Comments

Freezing level falling to 600m by the end of Tuesday.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.