

THE AVALANCHE HAZARD WILL BE MODERATE

Avalanche Hazard Forecast for Sunday 07/04/2019

Avalanche Problems

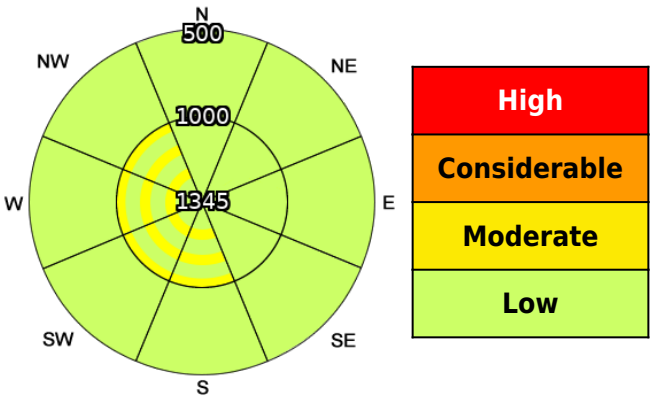

Wet Snow

Cornices

Forecast Snow Stability & Avalanche Hazard

The snowpack will slowly thaw at all levels and stability will generally be good. Localised instabilities will persist mainly in deeper accumulations of snow on steep South through West to North-West aspects above 1000 metres. Remaining cornices will be prone to collapse in the warmer conditions. The avalanche hazard will be Moderate.

Forecast Weather Influences

Moderate to strong East-North-Easterly winds. Showers, falling as rain to summit level in the evening, then mainly dry. Freezing level above the summits.

Comments

Easterly winds for the next few days and mainly dry. Mild till Tuesday when cooler conditions are due to return.

View the latest avalanche report

Scan the QR code to view the full Avalanche Hazard Report on the SAIS website.